GROUP-A

1. Read the following paragraph carefully and answer the questions: 2×7 = 14

The world is getting industrialised at a very fast pace. Added to this is the poisonous fuel discharge coming out of exhaust pipes of countless petrol-driven cars. As a result, the amount of carbon-dioxide content of the atmosphere around us is dangerously going up, reducing the proportion of oxygen—the life giving gas that we inhale for purifying our blood and maintaining the functions of the body. We know that carbon-dioxide released by us with our breath is required by plants for preparing their food (chlorophyll) with the help of sunlight. But due to the mass scale felling of trees and destructions of forests, the proportion of free oxygen is lessening. Now, we know that plants are useful in several ways for the survival of man. The green leaves of shady trees regulate rainfall, their roots keep soil together and prevent erosion. And so, big plants should be preserved for the vital need of maintaining ecological balance.

- (a) Give one reason for the increase in carbon-dioxide content in the atmosphere.
- (b) Why is oxygen important for us?
- (c) How do plants prepare their food?
- (d) Why is oxygen lessening in the atmosphere?
- (e) How do trees effect rainfall?
- (f) How do trees prevent soil erosion?
- (g) Why should big plants be preserved?

GROUP-B

2. Attempt a summary of the following paragraph and also add a title: 12

A knowledge of psychology is essential in order to draw up a good advertisement, one which will attract people and persuade them to buy something. Advertisements help people to make up their minds. An understanding of human nature and the way people's minds work is very necessary while writing something that will make a person decide to part with her or his money. Some unskillful writers instead of attracting people to buy goods, make them feel
